

Chef Craig & Camping

As a kid I vividly remember summers with my grandparents at Lake Lanier. They lived just above a popular camping and boating area and it was heaven for me. Camping outside on those campgrounds and in a tree fort we built was a blast. We would fish most of the summer and have fish fries on the weekends. We picked fresh corn, peas, tomatoes, okra and peppers from my grandparents' garden for our meals. Eating fresh picked veggies and fresh caught fish - is there anything better?

As an adult, camping all over Georgia and the southern states as a hobby has been the best way for me to get some down time.

Working in restaurants and as a caterer as well as cooking at home every chance I can energizes my interest in cooking. Even now, my passion for food encourages me to constantly try new things and improve on recipes. So why not bring together this passion for food and love of camping?

My vision for "interactive camping" is for a group of folks to get together and have fun in the great outdoors while learning to put together some delicious fresh foods and to enjoy great meals and take a break from the urban pace.

I hope to see you out there with us and look forward to an exciting season and many classes this year. Thank you!
